THE American Embassy hosted Brian Bwembya aka B-Flow where he launched his Go out and vote campaign phase II with his partners, Youth Women in Action.

During the event, B-Flow also launched his new album with his single titled, Dear Mama featuring President Barack Obama and Ambassador Eric Schultz.

Visiting US Department of State Deputy Assistant Secretary for African Affairs Todd Haskell said, said that when President Obama launched the Young African Leaders Initiative in 2010, because he realised the potential of African youth given that the majority of the population in Africa is of young people. The event took place on Thursday. He encouraged young

Zambians to fulfil civic responsibilities and to play a role in Zambia's democratic process by voting on August 11.

Haskell also reiterated that, "The US government cares about elections in Africa and we seek the same outcomes we do around the globe – free, fair, peaceful, and transparent elections."

Ambassador Schultz said that the US Mission in Zambia is proud to work with young leaders like B-Flow on programmes that support women's empowerment and youth engagement.

He said; "Like all Zambians, youth have a responsibility and right to participate in the democratic process of Zambia in the upcoming elections and to uphold Zambia's international reputation as a leader of peaceful democratic transitions."

Ambassador Schultz said the US government is confident that Zambia will uphold its reputation of a peaceful, democratic nation and to that end reiterated the American government commitment to assist Zambia with nearly US$4 million devoted to the 2016 elections.
